

PRESS RELEASE 2nd September 2024

For Immediate Release

SEN Books has been purchased by SEND Group Ltd, ensuring continued Excellence in SEN Resources

Earlier this year, Colin and Rachel Redman announced their plans to retire after more than 25 years of dedication to SEN Books. SEN Books is a valued bookshop to professionals in the SEND field. As well as selling and promoting a range of SEN books Colin & Rachel have worked with authors such as Steve Chinn, Judy Hornigold, and Neil MacKay and together they've published many resources, all focused on supporting pupils with special educational needs. Today, we're pleased to announce that SEN Books has become part of the SEND Group Ltd, led by Arran and Lucy Smith. This change ensures that SEN Books will continue to provide the high-quality resources and support that the SEND community has come to expect.

Comment from Colin Redman, Director of SEN Books:

Arran Smith has been a trusted colleague for many years. His extensive work in dyslexia, neurodiversity, and education makes him exceptionally well-suited to lead SEN Books into the future. We are confident that under his and Lucy's leadership, SEN Books will remain a valuable resource for teachers, parents, and SEND professionals. We're especially delighted for the authors we work with that there will be continuity for their resources and a boost to the awareness of their work.

Comment from Arran Smith, Director of SEND Group:

"We are excited to take on the responsibility of continuing the excellent work that Colin and Rachel have done with SEN Books. Our focus is on maintaining the strong legacy they've built while expanding our reach and impact within the education community. We look forward to providing ongoing support to those dedicated to special education needs and disability."

About SEN Books:

SEN Books is a specialist bookshop that offers a wide range of titles on dyslexia, dyspraxia, ADHD, autism, and other learning difficulties. We exhibit at numerous SEN and Inclusion Conferences across the UK and offer a mail-order service to ensure that SENCOs, Teaching Assistants, SEN Governors, and parents have access to essential resources. Over the past 25 years, Rachel and Colin Redman have established SEN Books as a trusted name in the field, known for the quality and diversity of our offerings.

About SEND Group:

SEND Group is a leader in the field of special education needs and disability. We specialise in delivering accredited online training to educators, professionals, and parents, equipping them with the knowledge and skills needed to support neurodiverse individuals. In addition to our training services, we offer a range of literacy and maths products through our mail-order service, providing vital resources to support learning and development. Our commitment is to continue the work of SEN Books while enhancing and expanding the services offered to our community.
